- Takes on responsibilities beyond her age, such as caregiving or emotional labor.
- Suppresses her own needs to maintain harmony or avoid conflict.
- Feels pressure to be the "golden child" or the "caretaker" within the family dynamic.

The relationship between a daughter and her parents is typically characterized by a mix of affection, responsibility, social expectations, and personal development.

While the core biological connection is straightforward, the social and emotional dimensions add layers of complexity. For many, being a daughter involves navigating parental expectations, cultural norms, and personal aspirations, which can influence life choices and self-perception.
